Getting away from daily life

A spiritual spot where you can recharge your energy

Migukurumitama Shrine

Included on the list of the 100 Best Greens in Osaka, this shrine is an excellent place to refresh yourself. The view of the sun rising between Otake and Medake peaks of Mt. Niho can be seen only on a few days in spring (around April 6) and autumn (around September 6). Though not known widely, this spectacle is very popular among local people.

Historical townscape of Jinai-machi

The Jinai-machi area features temples and merchants' houses dating back to the Edo period, taking you on a time trip into the past. Enjoy the area in various ways, such as dropping in at a café to take a break from walking, and visiting unique stores.

For more information, see pages 5-8.

Beautiful sunset from the Ishikawa

The riverbed of the Ishikawa near Jinai-machi is the best spot to enjoy the sunset. The setting sun is reflected on the water, casting a breathtaking golden glow all around.

Walking

around Tondabayashi

It's worth visiting the following sites in Tondabayashi and discovering the local attractions, including the historical townscape like a period drama setting, the beautiful, relaxing natural environment, and various outdoor activities not possible in the city. Want to get away from daily life? Then take a trip to Tondabayashi!

Hands-on experiences, day and night

Takidani Fudomyoo-ji Temple

This is one of Japan's three major temples dedicated to the Fudomyoo deity. Along with the statue of Fudomyoo, the statues of his attendants, Kongara Doji and Seitaka Doji, are designated as national important cultural properties. Famous for its Buddhist service to pray for recovery from eye illness and for warding off evil and bringing good luck, this temple attracts many people all year round.

Have fun drinking together in Banrinoharu Beer Hall, a remodeled sake warehouse!

For more information, see page 13.

Banrinoharu Brewery, a closed sake brewery, was revived as a craft beer factory following an encounter between a traveling brewer and a descendant of the last sake brewing family in Jinai-machi where the brewing industry had thrived from the Edo period. The spacious beer hall next to the brewing factory is exquisitely designed and creates a feeling of openness. Here, you can enjoy locally-produced craft beer in an atmosphere that makes you feel the local history.

"I want to work with my dog." Driven by this desire, the owner opened this facility to welcome all visitors, both with and without pets.

Favorite 2 Kominka Ochikata

A place with a good old atmosphere, packed with many specialties.

A quaint traditional Japanese folk house, Kominka Ochikata accommodates four shops, including a Nepalese restaurant, and shops selling dorayaki and treats for dogs, all of which have special, distinctive characteristics. For example, the homemade dorayaki is made with fluffy pancakes and smooth red bean paste, which took more than six months' effort to perfect. Nepalese dishes are prepared by an experienced Nepalese chef. Visitors can dine with their dogs, with the dog menu featuring homemade, safe additive-free dog foods. Antique tableware items that enhance the dining experience are also available for sale. Enjoy exploring the various specialties that fill the place.

Favorite 1 Banrinoharu Beer Hall

A sake warehouse-turned-beer hall offers a special drinking experience.

The craft beer produced with well water known as "golden water" in Jinai-machi since the early Meiji period is smooth and aromatic with a mild aftertaste—ideal for those who are not fond of bitter beer as well as beer lovers. Special meals made with seasonal ingredients purchased directly from local farmers go perfectly with the beer. "We aim to return the favor to local people for their support by making Tondabayashi a more vibrant place," says the owner. The brewing factory is also open to visitors. Enjoy a special time with beer and food in a space where you can feel the atmosphere of the former sake warehouse.

Fish and chips made with fried trout coated with a beer batter have a crunchy and fluffy texture that makes you want more and more.

It is also pleasant to walk on the path from the parking lot to Tsumuru while enjoying the rural landscape of Tondabayashi.

Favorite 3 Tsumuru

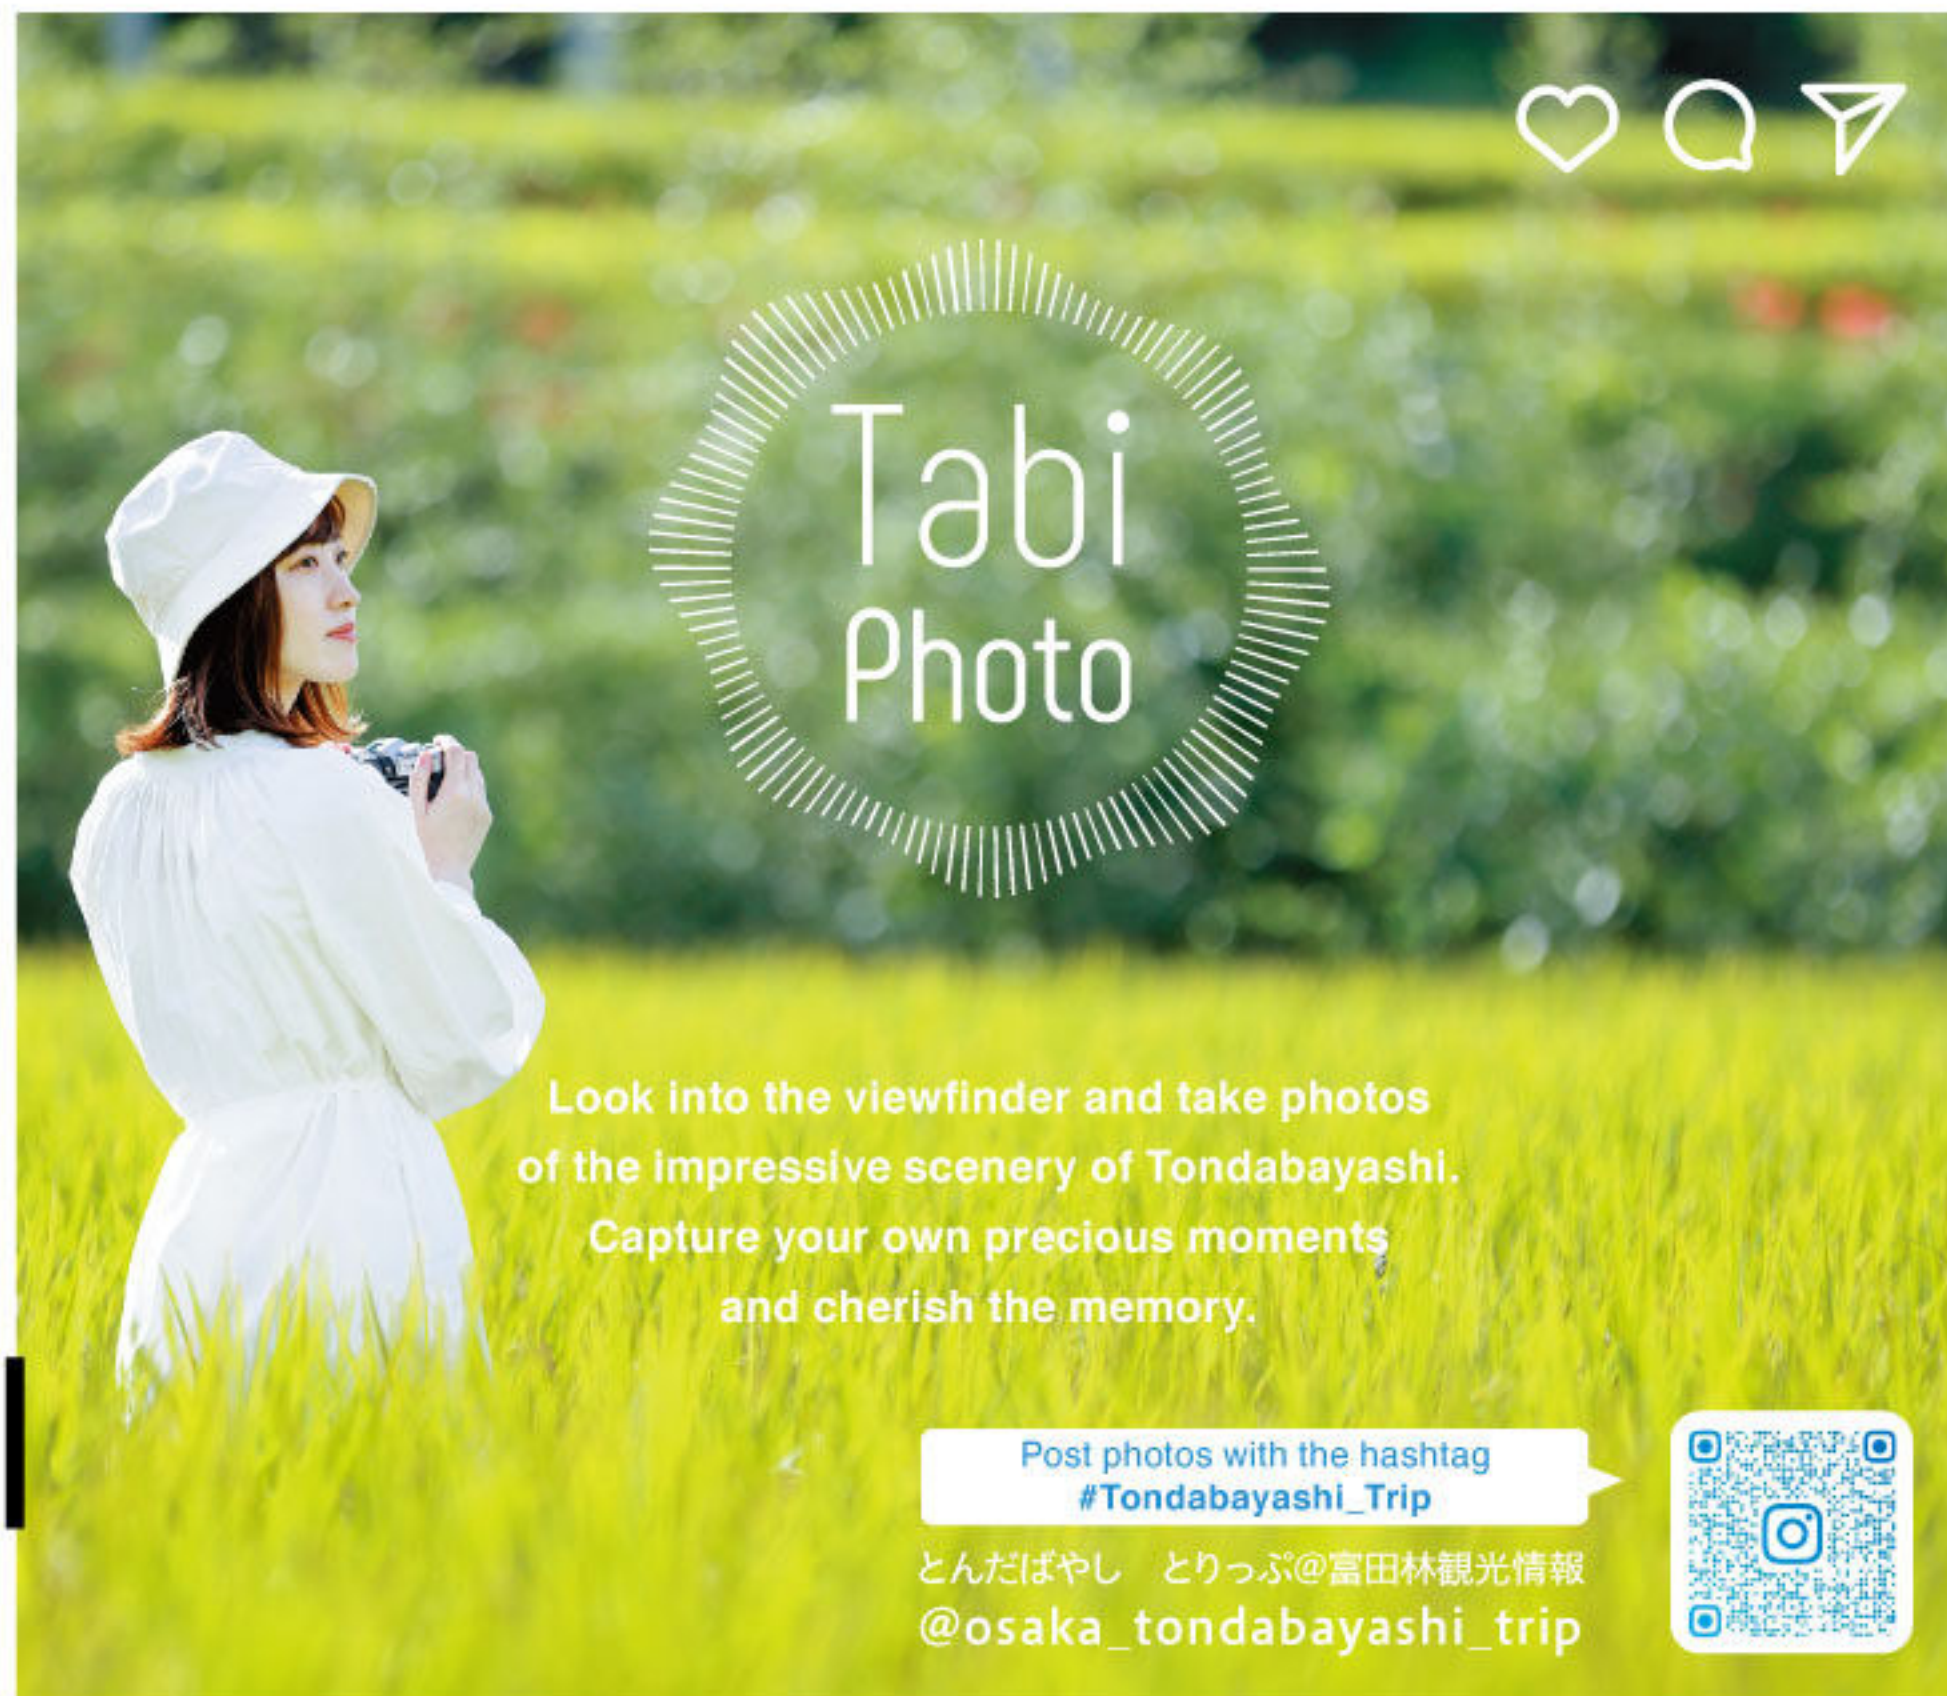

This is a place where people can casually drop in and relax. Here, many personal bonds have been forged.

One of the characteristics of Tsumuru is its tableware and furniture items, each of which has its own history. With its welcoming environment, this place encourages friendly interactions between regular local customers and visitors from afar. The owner couple say they love being a place for people to spend time together and develop friendships. The couple's warm personality is reflected in the meals which are made with lots of seasonal vegetables and fruits, the natural sweetness of which enhances the taste of special coffee from Nepal. The time spent in the relaxing atmosphere created by the owner couple will be an unforgettable experience.

Emblem of Tondabayashi City

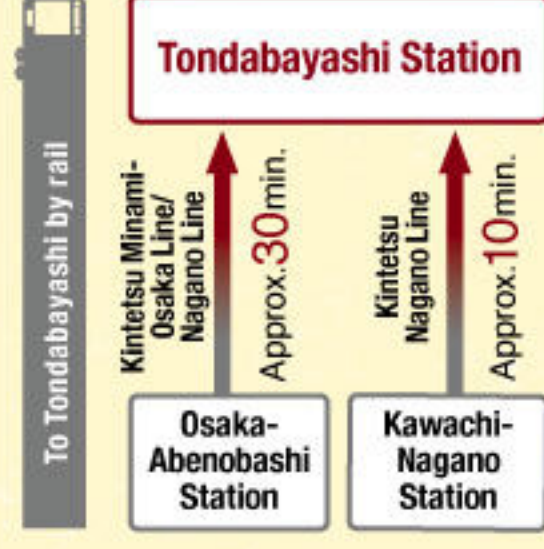

This emblem combines three of the Japanese katakana character "ト" (To), the first syllable of "Tondabayashi." Three "To"s can be read as "tom" ("mi" means "three" in Japanese), which is the first kanji character of "Tondabayashi," meaning "wealth." Both ends of each of these characters are shaped like an arrow, representing the city expanding its presence far and wide in all directions.

Location

Located in the southeastern part of Osaka Prefecture, Tondabayashi City boasts a rich natural and historical heritage. The city has prospered since ancient times, as shown by the historical townscape preserved in Jinai-machi.
